In lieu of anything else...

- Jan. 22nd, 2011 at 2:42 AM

A single dark fill for comment_fic.

Supernatural; Lucifer/Castiel; [song excerpt] (Blue October, "Drilled a Wire Through My Cheek")

R, I think? Dark AU wherein Cas has been captured by Lucifer.

He has never been bound by chains before.

Castiel bows his head and ignores the ache in his body as gravity works him over, makes this restraint worse. The metal digs into his bare skin, the cloth over his eyes and plugs in his ears make him unable to focus on anything but the weight of the chains and how it hurts to be suspended on the wall in this position.

If he knew that Lucifer were near, watching him, he would ask for release once and be silent. As it is he remains silent, bears the pain, pretends that he does not want the touch that Lucifer offers him.

He pretends that being bound and held open, suspended, does not make him wish for more than the endless ache and the loneliness.

All of this pretending, he reasons, will help him remain silent when Lucifer offers once more to free him, if only he would bow at the Devil's feet and swear allegiance.

Castiel twists in the chains, hisses as his wrists begin to bleed, and pretends that he does not exist.